DETAILED ACTION

This communication is in response to RCE received on 9/12/07.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 31 – 37 and 61 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Chen et al. (6,933,726).

The applied reference has a common inventor with the instant application. Based upon the earlier effective U.S. filing date of the reference, it constitutes prior art under 35 U.S.C. 102(e). This rejection under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) might be overcome either by a showing under 37 CFR 1.132 that any invention disclosed but not claimed in the reference was derived from the inventor of this application and is thus not the invention "by another," or by an appropriate showing under 37 CFR 1.131.

As to claims 31 – 37, Chen et al. (hereinafter Chen discloses) an apparatus and method for reducing borehole current effects comprising a sleeve (11) having an outer surface and an inner surface, and a sleeve hole extending from the outer surface to the inner surface, the sleeve (11) adapted to be disposed over the antenna array (15, 16, 17) such that the outer surface is directed outward from the mandrel (51); and an electrode (12) disposed within the sleeve hole (not labeled) extending from the outer surface to the inner surface and adapted to conductively connect to the mandrel (51), the electrode (12) having an external section (end of the electrode toward the outer surface of the sleeve) that is larger than a base section (end of the electrode toward the inner surface of the sleeve), the external section positioned proximate the outer surface and the base section disposed within the sleeve hole proximate the inner surface (Note fig. 2, 3 and 8).

As to claim 61, Chen discloses that the external section (end of the electrode toward the outer surface of the sleeve) includes an exposed outside surface area positioned relative to the sleeve (12) and the hole for exposure to the borehole environment, and wherein a surface area of the exposed outside surface (end of the electrode toward the outer surface of the sleeve) is substantially larger than a cross-sectional area of the base section (end of the electrode toward the inner surface of the sleeve) (Note fig. 8).

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed on 6/19/07 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant's argument that the electrode 12 does not have, however an identifiable external section and a base section. However Fig. 8 of Chen clearly discloses electrode 12 having an identifiable external section (end of the electrode toward the outer surface of the sleeve) and a base section (end of the electrode toward the inner surface of the sleeve).
